

Casa Oasis

Situated in one of the greenest valleys in the region, Casa Oasis is fast becoming one of the most talked about properties around. The dramatic difference from derelict ruin to luxury hotel has happened in only a matter of months, and although there is still work to be done before the grand opening on 22nd October, the owner Maarten van den Hooven, is confident that this will all be finished in time for the grand opening party on 22nd October 2006.

This beautiful new luxury bed and breakfast has been transformed from its original state by the infectious enthusiasm and drive of Daniel, Janny and Maarten. Their enthusiasm has rubbed off on to their friends and neighbours who, along with local builders, have all worked hard to achieve a fabulous building that has been modernised yet still retains it's original character. The local builders are so proud of their involvement that they have been known to bring their wives and girlfriends around to show off the quality of the build.

Things have not been easy though and it was a long search to find just the right property. When they saw Casa Oasis for the first time, they could see the potential and bought it almost on the spot. Initially, as is common enough, there was no water, power or phone connections so even getting the project started was a struggle, so much so that their story has been picked up by the Dutch TV version of "No Going Back". Several Dutch newspapers have also chartered their success, with photographs and articles also being displayed on the Van den Hooven's web site.

The attention to detail, that will make Casa Oasis a success, is not just down to the high quality finish to the rooms but also to the personal touches in parts of the building work that complement the old character and the new renovation from a fabulous old wooden door which has been partially bricked up so that from the outside still looks like a door but from the inside is a window with charming appeal to the dining area and kitchen which has been adapted to serve guests drinks and food at the poolside.

Maarten Van der Hooven will certainly enjoy every success in this venture as his family's warmth and humour make everyone feel welcome. Casa Oasis will also boast a wonderful breakfast menu although, in his own words, "The pressure is on because my brother is a top chef in Italy and will have a critical eye on the quality of the food".

Casa Oasis, which is already accepting bookings, will be ready for its first staying guests who are arriving for the official opening on 22nd October 2006.
